Theme: Robert Baxt Lecture

Next S.Y.M. Meeting:
Sunday, February 20, 11:00 AM, Topic TBA

Robert Baxt Brings the Funny

For our February lecture, we're lucky to have local favorite, Robert Baxt, as our featured speaker.

Robert believes it isn't what you do, it's how you do it! As a full time working pro all his life, he truly believes that real people just want to be entertained; so he will focus on presentations of his original takes on effects. There will be no card tricks and no knuckle busting sleights, only commercial entertainment and laughs. As a winner of a FISM Trophy for Comedy, his rule is "Funny is Money".

Robert is proud of the fact that he has never had a "real" job. After putting himself through college with money he earned from performing, he was presented with the dual opportunities of being accepted to both Ringling Bros. Clown College, and to Law School. Without hesitation, he chose the one that would better for his comedy career: Law School! But after graduating with a juris doctorate degree and taking the Bar exam, Robert never practiced and proceeded on to a full time career in show business.

With his comedy magic act, he won both the 1st Prize in the National I.B.M. Gold Medal Stage Competition (Lance Burton handed him the trophy and Robert claims it still has his DNA on it!), followed the next year by a FISM trophy for Comedy in Madrid, Spain.

He has performed in Las Vegas, Comedy Clubs, Colleges, Cruise Ships, and on TV and at Magic Conventions around the world. He has a line of Comedy Magic Routines available for other performers at www.robertbaxt.com/shop and writes jokes for other performers.

HEATING UP YOUR MAGIC BY 'ONE DEGREE'

John Guastafarro Shows How Small Changes Produce Big Results

The temperature inside everyone's homes during Assembly 291's January virtual meeting was presumably mild, but thanks to John Guastafarro it felt more like One Degree.

Guastafarro, the club's guest lecturer, is not only a magic creator and frequent headliner at the Magic Castle but the author of several books on magic, including the acclaimed One Degree (as in, one degree from a boiling point), which focused on small, incremental shifts that transform good reactions into great reactions.

For the Westside Wizards, he focused on effects from his book En Route, which continues the One Degree philosophy. "I don't think a trick is ever done," Guastafarro said, citing the ever-evolving need to create ideal magical experiences for audiences. "We might perfect the handling, but we're always en route to perfect our performance."

Guastafarro's principles for approaching such perfection boil down to simplicity (cutting out the fat), artistry (making certain an effect is beautiful to watch, even when nothing magical is happening), and creativity (a fun plot and presentation). "We can probably all do thirty minutes with a deck of cards," he said, "but I like to make sure that thirty minutes feels diverse, and that it's not just the standard plots."

Sometimes that means using the card box as a prop, or personifying the cards. Other times it's small presentational changes; referring to volunteers by name, waiting an extra beat during a pause, or inserting moments of silence. "This idea of one degree, it's not just handling," he said. "It's also how you interact with your audience." With that in mind, Guastafarro uses a light touch during card manipulations since "I don't want the audience to feel tense if I'm trying to do a double-lift."

Guastafarro's lecture featured several signature effects, including Virus (a "hacked" card deck can't return to normal until "deck support" magically removes the virus), Box Whisperer (a card appears inside an empty card box after someone whispers its name into the box), and Mini-Mental (a multiple-selection routine where Guastafarro "reads minds" to magically produce four cards). In each case, he demonstrated how he altered standard premises to either personify the effect or make deeper connections with an audience.

He also took time out to teach his stylish "Ballet Cut," which "reminds me of a pirouette across the stage." Considering how many Westside Wizards are now en route to one-degree changes, Guastafarro certainly stuck the landing. – Dan Cray

President's Message

A word from Dan Cray...

It's February, so love is in the air—our love of magic, right?

Between the cooler winter weather and the fact spring is still weeks away, I always feel like this is a great time of year to mess around with my “Someday Magic”: tricks I love but just haven't quite found a presentation framework to make them work for an audience. Some years, I actually manage to brainstorm a long-sought routine and the trick ends up on my go-to performance list for the rest of the year... so we'll see if that's the case this time around. Here's wishing you luck with your Someday Magic as well.

I don't know about you, but with so many dour things going on in the world I could use a good laugh... which is why I'm thrilled that the hilarious comedy magician Robert Baxt will be the guest lecturer for this month's virtual meeting. (Maybe you also saw him in January, he was in the gallery for last month's meeting.) I had a chance to talk with him by phone (a crude communication device that society used before Zoom) for a bit last month—what a fun guy, and he had me laughing right away. Definitely looking forward to this one.

With our own Phil Goodman fresh off of his Magic Castle debut last month, I want to close by repeating something I've said many times, but will now reiterate: the talent level in our club is flat-out amazing. Yes, we each come at it from different interests or performance levels, but I love that on any given day every one of us has the chops to lift people's spirits... in our case, through knowledge and/or presentation of magic.

That's not typical, and we shouldn't take it for granted. In recent weeks, I've had muggles tell me they wished they had a hobby or career that could take peoples' minds off of their real-life troubles, the way our Westside Wizards can. That's a pretty powerful compliment.

Have a healthy, magical February. See you online for this month's meeting!

Dan
